Introduction

Founded in 1881 Dokkyo University specializes in foreign language studies. They recently completed a new facility called the International Communication Zone (ICZ). This new facility includes a complete video production studio to create educational material.

Point of Selection

- Mr. Motoki, Dokkyo University

We use the video system for language education using video clips from our video library. Students do some role playing in front of cameras and teachers help correct pronunciation. The V-440HD was the ideal mixer for this application because the chroma key application. It seems like they are communicating with a real person. For example, 2 students learning German talk each other in front of blue screen. We use a chroma-key composite effect with a scene of German street. For HDV shooting and recording the V-440HD was the clear choice in features and cost performance.

System Integration

The System

One of the main concepts of the ICZ is to create an environment of creativity and independence. They encourage students to create and share video content. They speak to each other in a foreign language in front of chroma key screen and composite with background video. They use HDV cameras and VCRs to record the production.
