Introduction

Showcasing local talent for their Creative Christmas show, the Heritage Wesleyan Church provided a video wall as their backdrop.

Pulling on the resources of their congregation, the Heritage Wesleyan Church in Rock Island, IL put on a unique holiday show where their doors swung open for all community members. Behind this "talent show" was a video wall where 5 EDIROL PR-50's were used with 9 IMAG cameras.

System

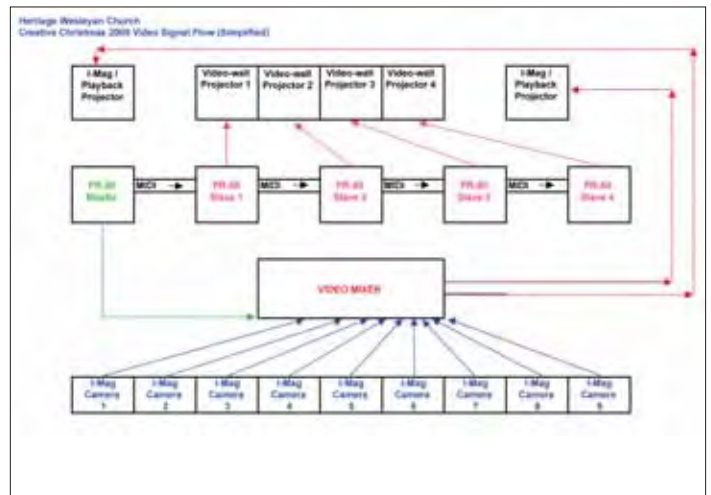

Paul Anderson, the technical director for the church explains that technology that they coveted and couldn't afford 3 or 4 years ago they have now. He further explains: "Our biggest outreach of the year, we performed our annual Creative Christmas show in December of 2005 for about 13,000 people. We had high expectations for the video wall where we used 5 PR-50 machines as the engines to make it all work. Media director Matt Podschweit and I set up all the gear and our volunteers ran it from there. With 30 people in our technical crew, 3 volunteers operated the PR-50's in slave mode. Our trained volunteers are accountants and farmers and it was quick and easy to train them on the PR-50 and because the system is so intuitive, once we had it set up, it just worked. I was amazed at how quickly we had success with the PR-50's - they operated just incredibly... seamless and solid."
